James recently joined the Consulting Architects of Alberta Board in 2025, but previously served on the IFMA Northern Alberta Chapter Board, bringing experience in professional and industry collaboration.

James is the Principal Architect and Founder of Senaltek Architecture Planning + Design Ltd. He is a Registered Architect in Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, and Pennsylvania, and holds credentials as a LEED Accredited Professional and Project Management Professional (PMP). A professional architect, project manager, and practice leader – James is passionate about forming teams of consultants and clients to shape and improve the built environment. James directs teams of architects, interior designers, engineers, and industry experts across a wide range of projects and development typologies. He has delivered a mixture of projects in new and existing buildings across North America for private, institutional, and public sector developers.

James's architectural practice is grounded in early, hands-on involvement in his family's construction practice, beginning in childhood and continuing through his early professional career. This experience established a practical understanding of construction processes and site realities that continues to inform a clear, execution-focused approach to design, consultant coordination, and project delivery.

Through his involvement with the CAA, James is excited at the opportunity to support initiatives that strengthen professional practice, encourage collaboration, and reinforce the role of consulting architects as leaders in both design and implementation.
